

Contents

List of Illustrations	ix
Acknowledgments	xi
A Note on Language	xv
Abbreviations	xvii
Introduction	1
Chapter 1 Making the Generous Cooking Pot, ca. 1890–1920	25
Chapter 2 Body Politics, Taste Matters, and the Creation of the Office du Niger, ca. 1920–44	70
Chapter 3 “We Farmed Money”: Reshaping the Office and Reclaiming Taste	106
Chapter 4 Reengineering the Office: Cooking with Metal Pots and Threshing Machines	142
Chapter 5 Rice Babies and Food Aid: Reengineering Women’s Labor and Taste during the Great Sahel Drought	177
Conclusion	211
Notes	217
Bibliography	295
Index	317

Illustrations

MAPS

1.1. The Middle Niger region and nearby Volta territory in the French Soudan, ca. 1905	33
2.1. The Office du Niger and surrounding region, ca. 1932–47	74
3.1. Locations of regional markets, wild food resources, and sources of wood fuel near the Kolongotomo region of the Office	120
3.2. Women’s gardens, trees, and wild resource claims near Kokry and Nara	122

FIGURES

I.1. A woman carrying a metal basin during the Great Sahel Drought	7
1.1. Pair of masked Ciwara dancers	29
1.2. Granary for rice in Baguinèda with man holding a plow	39
1.3. Saba fruits in a metal bucket	45
1.4. Hawa Fomba with nere seeds and soumbala	47
2.1. Young women pounding millet in an Office town	97
3.1. Women working at a well in Niono	114
3.2. Celebration with drummers in an Office town	141
4.1. Large-scale clearing of fields for irrigated agriculture	144
4.2. Metal pots in varying sizes showing the sides scrubbed bright and the bottoms blackened by the cooking fire	152

4.3. Mechanical threshing in an Office field	168
4.4. Workers processing cotton by machine in Niono	172
5.1. The technique of carrying a baby on the back	185
C.1. Food security motto for the Molodo zone	210
C.2. Fatouma Coulibaly and Nièni Tangara with a moto in Kolony (km 26)	214