

C O N T E N T S

Acknowledgments	xi
Introduction	I
Pain as Experience	I
The Phenomenological Approach	3
The Structure of the Following Investigation	7
I Methodological Considerations	II
Fundamental Methodological Commitments: Epoché, the Phenomenological Reduction, and Eidetic Variation	12
Three Allegations: Psychologism, Introspectionism, and Solipsism	20
Revamping Eidetic Variation: From Pure to Dialogical Phenomenology	25
The Genetic Method in Phenomenology	31
2 Pain and Intentionality: A Stratified Conception of Pain Experience	41
Pain and Intentionality	42
Pain as a Feeling-Sensation	44
Pain as an Intentional Feeling	49
Apprehension—Content of Apprehension	52
Husserl’s Analysis of Pain in the Logical Investigations	54
Pain as a Stratified Phenomenon	59
Sartre’s Phenomenology of Pain in Being and Nothingness	62
3 The Phenomenology of Pain Dissociation Syndromes	68
Congenital Insensitivity to Pain	69
The Discovery of Pain	74
Lobotomy, Cingulotomy, and Morphine	80
Threat Hypersymbolia	83
Asymbolia for Pain	85
Pain Affect without Pain Sensation	93

4 Pain and Temporality	97
Objective Time and Subjective Temporality	98
The Different Senses of Presence:
The Fundamental Levels of Time-Constitution	100
Implicit and Explicit Presence	105
The Field of Presence as the Horizon of Pain Experience	110
Memory and Pain	112
Anticipation and Pain	115
5 The Body in Pain: Leib and Körper	120
Pain's Indubitability and Bodily Localizability	121
The Phenomenological Account	126
The Lived-Body as the Subject of Pain	127
Pain as Empfindnis	130
Pain's Twofold Localizability	133
Pain and the Constitution of the Lived-Body	135
The Structure of Pain Experience	137
6 The Phenomenology of Embodied Personhood: Depersonalization and Repersonalization	142
The Phenomenology of Embodied Personhood	143
Chronic Pain as Depersonalization	148
Chronic Pain as Repersonalization	150
Implications for the Phenomenology of Medicine	154
Pain as an Expressible Phenomenon:
The Basic Elements of a Phenomenology of Listening	157
7 Pain and the Life-World: Somatization and Psychologization	164
Somatization and Psychologization	166
Somatization, Psychologization, and Their Origins in Experience	168
The Phenomenology of Somatization and Psychologization	171
The Life-World as the Wherefrom , Wherein , and Whereto of Experience	172
Between Homeliness and Homelessness:
Discordance in the Life-World	175
Masochism and Somatization	182

CONTENTS	ix
Conclusion	188
Notes	195
Bibliography	221
Index	231